For more about this software, you can check out this video review.  Disclaimer: Q: I want my button to be positioned at the bottom of the div, but the position is at the bottom right instead So for the life of me I cannot figure this out. I want a button to be at the bottom of the div. See image below. This is the HTML Boat Name And this is the CSS .headings { width:500px; height:80px; background-color:rgb(128, 0, 0); } .btn { position:absolute; bottom:50%; width:50px; height:50px; background-color:rgb(255,255,255); left:70%; } Here is a JSFiddle This seems simple enough but I cannot understand what I am doing wrong. A: You should float the.headings div. .headings { width: 500px; height: 80px; background-color: rgb(128, 0, 0); float: left; position: relative; } .btn { width:50px; height:50px; background-color:rgb(255,255,255); left:70%; bottom: 50%; } Boat Name 09e8f5149f

Despite little data on the experience of care of children who have cancer, researchers do recognize the importance of assessing the experience of health care. The purpose of this study was to assess a broad sample of parents' perceptions of the interdisciplinary experience of care for their child. Using a postal questionnaire, parents were asked to rate their satisfaction with care received at each component of the cancer care delivery system. A total of 1822 mailed questionnaires were completed, for a response rate of 65%. In general, parents were highly satisfied with the overall experience of care, but rated the experience at both hospitals and the interdisciplinary outpatient clinics more favorably than their experience at the regional centers. There were no differences in the interdisciplinary care provided by each of the three components of the care delivery system. Parents of children with cancer were generally highly satisfied with the care delivered during their child's treatment and were generally highly satisfied with the care provided at
